---SUMMARY---

A cap seller named Ramu, tired from his day, fell asleep under a tree, only to have playful monkeys steal all his caps and wear them. Upon waking, Ramu initially struggled to retrieve them as the monkeys simply imitated his frustrated actions. Remembering their imitative nature, he cleverly threw his own cap to the ground, prompting the monkeys to copy him and drop all the caps, allowing Ramu to collect his merchandise and continue his journey home, having learned the importance of calm and clever thinking.
